

Cacoo.com

This wireframing application seems to work pretty good. It's free but you still have to create an account if you want to save a file that you make. Which ultimately is not that big of a deal. It appears to be pretty user friendly and I am currently considering using it for my final wireframe. The only issue I can see without actually using it is that it could probably use more images for place holders.

Gliffy.com

After playing around with this wireframing tool for a little bit I feel it is not very user friendly. This is disappointing because a Google search description claims it to be excellent for use in wireframing website ideas. I believe a free online wireframing tool should be a lot more transparent in that regard. However, it looks like it would be a great tool for a flow chart.